When President-elect Garfield is in- hear of Dr. Thomas leaving the Church, augurated, nearly every State in the Union will be represented by military or civic organizations.

Mr. P. T. Barnum, who has made a world-wide reputation as a showman, is lying sick in New York, and on Sunday last the clergy and congregations of Bridgeport, Connecticut, where he has lived for so many years, were appealed to in the following manner:

In the following manner:

Sara Bernhardt won't go to Washington to give a performance, but will play four times at Baltimore, and special trains will be run from Washington to the Monumental City for the benefit of the Washingtonians. It will be remembered that Edwin Booth has not been in Washington since his brother assassinated Lincoln, and has firmly resolved never to play in that city. He goes to Baltimore occasionally, and special trains are run to that city from Washington for the purpose of carrying those who want to hear the great tragediau.

Another straw, and by no means a little one, was thrown upon the wind this morning to show which way the current is. While sixteen members of the United States Grand Jury were waiting for the opening of their session at Madison, they took among themselves a vote showing their preferences for United States Senator. The first ballot was expressive of their choice, irrespective of candidates named. It showed 11 for Keyes, 2 for Sawyer, and 3 scattering. The next ballot was as to their choice between Keyes and Sawyer, and resulted in giving Keyes 14, and Sawyer 2. The significance of the showing is more important when it is considered that the sixteen men are representative men from various parts of the

There is a Democratic newspaper in South Carolina, called the Charleston News and Courier, which is intensely ultra in its politics, but on the question of Congress making provisions for the payment of the United States deputy marshals, it says:

Congressian Stephens. The appropriation for the tag of the Deputy Marshals ought to be in it is a question, too, involving a racognition of and obedience to law, on which no Congressian can afford to vote in opposition to his innate sense of right. No party cancus should be allowed to be the keeper of a Congressian's conscience.

For a Southern Democratic paper this is pretty good. It is better than any Northern Democratic paper has done, or has the courage to do. Not one of them has yet been honest enough to demand that the Democrats in Congress shall stop making fools of themselves, and attend strictly to public business of importance. On a good many questions of national concern, the Southern Democratic papers are fairer and more honest than the Northern party papers.

lect committee appointed by that conference, and which recently tried him in St. Louis. He was charged with not becommittee was composed of some of the ablest men in the conference, and went to St. Louis to hear the case. The committee was, by no means, harmonious in discussing the question of Dr. Thomas' guilt or innocence, neither was it unanimous in endorsing his orthodoxy. The sessions of the committee were lively, and some times bitter feelings arose, and a war of words was the result. After days of consideration, the matter was put to a test vote, and the committee held that no censure could be applied to Dr. Thomas; that he was in perfect accord with the Church regarding the subject of atonement; and that the only cause of controversy was the wording of a sermon delivered by him.

This is an important decision, and will be read with much interest y the membe read with much interest y the members of the Church in all parts of the country. It restores Dr. Thomas, and if he likes, will give him a pastorate in the Rock River conference. But the Church is still at sea on these three very grave questions of church doctrine. If Dr. Thomas does not believe in the inspiration of the scriptures, if he does not believe in the doctrine of the atonement, and if he does not believe in literal hell-fire and eternal punishment, does the Methodist Church stand with him on these points? If the St. Louis committee decides that the Doctor is in necord with the Church on these questions they make the Church stand before the world in an entirely new light. It will be interesting now to know exactly what the Methodist Episcopal Church does believe on these points of doctrine.

Another question is, will Dr. Thomas take another appointment at the hands of the Rock River conference? We hope he will. He is too good a man for the Church to lose. He lose him, and more especially if he is not too much at variance with the general doctrines of the Church. There are thousands who would regret exceedingly to the child came a postal card, with the child came a postal card, with the change!

and becoming one of these " popular" and inde pendent preachers. They succeed in that line unless they are sensational and it is to be hoped that Dr. Thomas will never become one of their number. This country has two noted ministers who deal largely in sensationalism-Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and De Witt Tulmage and they are sufficient. Robert Collyer, one of the grandest of men, and one of the most carnest, pure, and eloquent of ministers, has never made the blunder of preaching sensational sermons, and we trust Dr. Thomas, who is also a grand man, an earnest, pure, and eloquent minister, will never follow the footsteps of Talmage or Florence Mc

MILWAUKEE SPECULATION.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. Dec. 15-Quite a lively sensation exists in Democratic circles this evening over James S. White's treachery to his backers in the Daily News. When he bought the paper $8,000 were loaned him with the agreement that, if the enterprise proved successful, he should return the money, but if not successful it would be considered as a donation. He has used $2,000 of his own money in the publication, and has sold the establishment for $15,000, failing to reimburse his backers. He is just $13,000 ahead for his year's work. Naturally there is much indignation at this, especi-

Opening of the Santa Fe Trail. Ir was at about the beginning of this century that it dawned upon our people that there were good markets as well as cities and people in and near this same Rio Grande Valley, and under Mexican rule. There is said to be in the ancient palace at Santa Fe a Spanish document proving the existence of a trail in the last quarter of the eighteenth century from the old French settlements in what is now Illinois to some of the towns in New Mexico, and from one of them-Abiquiu-to California. General Kearny said to have dispatched a courier over The latter. But all efforts of the writer have failed to prove the authenticity, or secure proper translations, of the document in question. Mr. Gregg, in his interesting book, "The Commerce of the Prairies" (now out of print), from which much information could be collected, stated that a merchant of Kaslected, stated that a merchant of Kas-kaskia named Morrison, heard, about 1804, through some trappers, of the stories which the Indians had told them of this ancient land, where Spanish pomp and civilization went hand in hand with royally high prices for mer-chandise. He dispatched one La Lande, a French Canadian, on an adventure to Santa Fe, and Mr. La Lande went thither with alsonity, but omitted the thither with alacrity, but omitted the trifling formality of coming back again. The log-huts of Kaskaskia knew him no more; he lived in opulence in a one-story adobe house, while the excellent Looked for the coming which might not be; and finally La Lande died in the odor of sanctity, and was gathered to his fathers, without having rendered any account of sales, or made any remittance to his principal.

Four men, starting with their goods in 1812, and manfully pushing their way to Santa Fe, returned only in 1821, having been imprisoned during nearly all the intermediate time. The next year, however, marked the opening of the Santa Fe Trail, that wonderful road, some eight hundred miles in length; rising so imperceptibly for three-quarters of this distance as to seem absolutely level, and without bridge from end to and. There it stretched away toward and. Inere it stretched away toward the sunset half a century ago, and there it stretches to-day; and what poet's dream, what prophetic vision of the ardent patriot, steadfastly believing in the future greatness of his country, is commensurate with either the romance or the reality of the march expensed by or the reality of the march over and beside it, during those fifty years, of the pioneer, the trader, the soldier, the settler, and the railroad engineer?

chandise on pack horses or mules, and it was in 1824 that it was decided to use wagons, a number of which reached Santa Fe with much less difficulty than might have been expected. The practicability of this method being established, the trade began steadily to increase, and in a few years a large amount of capital was embarked therein. Its initial point was first Franklin, some one hundred and fifty miles west of St. Louis; then Independence; then Westport—all these towns being on the Missouri River, and thus easily reached during the season of navigation. Here were found motley crowds—traders, outfitters, dealers in supplies of all kinds, tourists, invalids hoping to regain their health by a trip on the plains, drivers, and "roughs" in abundance. The covered wagons were drawn first by horses; then by mules, then by both nules and over the cover then by both mules and oxen, and were carefully loaded. Besides the merchandise, supplies for the men were carried -say, bacon, flour, coffee, sugar, and a little salt, it being expected that enough buffaloes would be killed to furnish fresh meat. Starting off in detached parties, the wagons would rendezvous parties, the wagons would rendezvous at Council Grove, on a branch of the Neosho River, twenty miles north of the present town of Emporia, and here an organization would be effected for mutual aid and protection during the long journey. In such a carayan there would be perhaps one hundred weaps. be, perhaps, one hundred wagons, and a "captain of the caravan" would divide them into four divisions, with a lieutenant to each. Every individual in the caravan was compelled to stand his watch at night, and this guard must have presented a motley assortment of clothing and arms. When all was clothing and arms. When all was ready, the start was made. Every night a hollow square and temporary corral were made with the wagons, and the camp fires lighted outside of this square. Across swamps, quagmires, and even rivers, the teams were driven, men being sent ahead to make temporary bridges over the first two, of brush or long grass covered with earth, and sometimes, for crossing streams, to fabricate "buffalo boats" of hides stretched over frames of poles, or empty wagon bodies.

Dr. Holland and others, who have been discussing the question of how a young man should choose a profession, can profit by the experience of a young man who promised his dying father that he would adopt a profession and that it should be one that his conscience told him he was fitted to fill. The old man died and the son began to consider what profession he should select. At first he though of the medical, but reflection convinced him that he never could go through the ordeal of fitting for it, as he handn't the nerve to rob a grave-yard. Then he thought of the law, but as he became satisfied that he couldn't be friends on the street with the man who, in the court-room, called him a sniveling blackguard and whom he had hinted was an ex-train-wrecker, and moreover as he wasn't good at poker, he gave up that idea. He thought of the stage, but the conclusion that he shouldn't like to be fired at several times a week by the men with whose wives he nad flirted, made him feel that he was unfitted for that profession. The church suggested itself. He might be a clergyman. But when he asked himself: "Do you like to play croquet?" conscience compelled him to admit that he detected the reason. He was therefore. detested the game. He was, therefore, unfitted for the church. But at last a happy thought struck him. FARMERS who spread on a thin coat of twelve or fifteen loads of manure to the acre, and expect to raise a good crop, would be astonished to see the quantities of the best kinds of manure which market gardeners often apply to an acre of land near the cities. What would they say to the application of six hundred dollars' worth of horse manure to a single acre? Two or three hundred dollars worth of manure per acre is a common thing among market gardeners, and they find their account But Eclectric Oil-cured the sweet girl in so doing, too.

Hints for Young Ladies.

Now, girls, that you are going to the seaside for the summer, see that you return in the fall without your housebleached complexions. Never mind a little tan if you can get a permanent blush of pure healthy blood-red on your cheeks with it. You are too much a house plant, and a hot-house plant at that, in the city, and that white face, if not a sallow one, proves it. Your limbs, young ladies-your, in fact, legs-are in far too many cases good for nothing save to help you get in and out of carriages. You can't walk any respectable You laugh at the little, crippled feet of the Chinese women, yet, in point of fact, you are not much better off than they. You are too often crippled in the lungs with tight corsets, in the feet with tight shoes, and all about the wrist and should be will be wrist and should be will be wrist and should be will be writed and should be writed as the writed and the waist and shoulders with those beauifully fitting tight dresses, made to wear but not to work in. Some of you are obliged to earry your arms in a position to suit the dress, for the arms must give way to the requirements of the dress and not the dress to the arms. You look well outside, but if a capable, honest doctor should make a truthful report of the condition of your motive, vital and other powers within you, it would be an awful story. Too many of you are really cripples, for a girl may be a cripple without being lame, halt or blind, although to an anatomical eye your gait now, fettered as you are from foot to neck, is very much that of a cripple. And if you go to the seaside only to dress for breakfast, lunch and dinner, only to walk from the hotel door to the beach, and always to be hauled about in a carriage when a mile or two of ground is to be traveled over, you will re-turn cripples. Selah! and see to it and don't you forget it.—N. Y. Graphic.

Swine in Summer.

WE never fed old corn in mid-summer, and never should unless we were going to fatten before winter. As soon as pasture is ready we should turn the hogs in and let the pasture carry them through until growing corn is ready to feed them, which it will do handsomely. But the pasture should not be crowded —that is, it should be allowed to get a good start before any stock, and hogs especially, are turned into it. Great loss results from treading down the young, tender plants before they have fully es-tablished tnemselves; but when far enough advanced all that is necessary for hogs in addition to the pasture are salt and plenty of water. We would salt at least once a day. Grain is worse than useless; or, perhaps, a better ex-pression would be that it is not needed, and feeding it is not only a waste, but in one sense it is injurious. If the animal has nothing but the pasture to depend upon it will depend upon it and do well, but where grain is fed the animal looks for it, and it will not depend so much or do so well upon the pasture. It seems scarcely necessary to suggest that shade is necessary, and yet hogs are not always provided with it. It is downright cruelty to expose a hog to the burning sun of the summer days, especially when shelter from the heat can be cheaply provided in so many ways. Provide some place where the animal can retire in the heat of the day. It will do better by a very large per cent, than it no shelter is provided. From the nature of the log, it suffers easily from the heat, even when not in the condition which we call fat. It always has more or less fat about it. It is natural for it to lay on fat, and even when it is not getting what are classed as fat-producing foods, as compared with other animals it is fat; and the confining it during the summer to grass is partly for the purpose of creating as little fat as possible and building up a foundation for pork in the winter. But do the best we can, and still there will be enough fat about the animal to cause it to suffer greatly when exposed to the heat. Some provision should also be made for it to wallow. Very often the belief prevails that it is the love of the hog for filth that induces it to seek the mud. Never was there a greater mistake made. The hog does not love filth; it is in fact one of the cleanest animals in existence, if it has a change to be. chance to be. The reason that the hog seems filthy is because the owner is filthy. The animal is kept and fed in dirt, and to expect it to shun it when it can not get away from it, is an absurdean not get away from it, is an absurdity, and is laying the blame where it does not belong. But mud, in the strict meaning of the term, is not filth; and when used by the hog is the animal's method of taking a bath. The skin becomes hot and itchy and is frequently covered with a dandruff-like substance. In wallowing the mud acts medicinally In wallowing the mud acts medicinally, and when dried and rubbed off, either by scratching or lying down, the skin's surface is cleased.—Western Rural.

recipes for preserving meats: Beef should not be allowed to freeze. Salting should be deferred till the meat is ripe. The fat of pork only should be salted, the lean should be used for sausatted, the teah should be used for sausage meat. Pack pork in clean barrels on the edge, first scattering on the bottom a few handfuls of salt, then again upon every layer, packing very close, and when all is packed in pour on a button made by discourage salt in better brine made by dissolving salt in hot water. Be sure to cover the pork and place a board upon it, and a weight upon the board, to keep all in place. When a piece is removed, be sure that the remainder is tightly pressed down. For curing hams use six gallons of water, nine pounds of salt, two pounds of sugar, one quart of molasses, four ounces of saltpeter, two ounces of saleratus, for 100 pounds of meat. First cover the hams with sait and let them lie a couple of days, flesh side up, then pack them close in barrets and pour upon them the brine above de-scribed. For small hams three weeks would be long enough to stay in the brine, but if large ones let them remain six weeks. Then take them out, dry them, but do not allow them to freeze. When properly drained smoke them. The brine must not of course be applied to the meat until it is perfectly Extraction of Tree Roots by Dynamite.

In England, dynamite for extracting the roots of trees is largely used. One who has had experience says: "The tools or implements needed are of a simple description, viz.: an earth auger, which is similar to an old-fashioned wood-auger, two inches diameter at the bit end, about four feet long, and fitted with a cliebly, bellowed shield or fitted with a slightly hollowed shield or cap, which the operator fits against his chest when boring. This is used for boring holes between the fangs. In 2ddition to this there must be a crowbar grafting and stock ax. These are all the implements that are required. The operation is as follows: Suppose a large root is to be removed out of the ground, a hole is made with the earth auger, as described above, between two of the as described above, between two of the strongest fangs; this is put in at an angle, so that the bottom of the hole is as near under the center of the root as is possible. The hole is then charged with a few cartridges of dynamite, according to the size and strength of the root. A primer cartridge containing cap and fuse is then inserted on the top of the charge, and the whole ram-med down with loose earth by a wooden rammer. The end of the fuse is then lighted; this exp. odes the cap, and that in its turn the dynamite, and the whole mass is usually blown out, breaking up the root into convenient pieces for loadthe root into convenient pieces for loading up or burning. The fuse is cut off at sufficient length to allow the workmen to get out of danger, the distance being usually from fifty to a hundred yards, according to the strength of the charge. After the charge has exploded seldom any thing remains but a large hole, much resembling the bed of a boiler. I took particular notice that no damage whatever was done to the surrounding trees. We have had nearly four hundred roots out by this process; and with two of our common laboring and with two of our common laboring men, and one man sent by the agent of the Dynamite Company, we have been able to remove from twenty-five to thirty per day of roots, averaging from 1 ft. 6 in. to 4 ft. 6 in. diameter. I find, from careful calculations made, that we have been able to remove the roots in a far more expeditions manner than hitlierto, and at from 50 to 60 per cent. less cost. No one need be afraid of using dynamite on the score of its being dangerous; for, with ordinary care, it is, in my opinion, as safe to use as gonpowder.' PETER GRUB sold his share in an iron mine at Cornwall, Pa., reserving the right to enter the promises forever and take therefrom sufficient ore for the supply of one furnace. That was almost a hundred years ago, when iron ore was smelted in a somewhat crude fashion, and the average yield of a furnace was 1,500 tons a year. That was about the amount taken by Mr. Grub annually during his lifetime. But the process has been vastly improved since then, and new a furnace turns out as much in a single month. The ques-tion arose, of course, whether the heirs of Grub were entitled to as much ore as would supply an eighteenth or a nineteenth century furnace. A lawsuit has been in the courts for twenty-four years, employing some of the ablest lawyers in the State. The Supreme Court has just decided, on appeal, that ore can be taken in sufficienty to supply a furnace of the present time.

For marmalades of peach, pear, green grape, pineapple, quince, or plum, allow three quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit. Cut the fruit in pieces and put in the preserving kettle, with layers of sugar, placing fruit at the bottom to prevent scorching of the sugar. If the fruit is not very jucy, add a little water. Let all boil slowly together for about an hour and a half, or until the whole begins to look clear and becomes thick by cooling a portion on a plate, when it is done and may be put into jars or bowls. During the process of slow boiling stir enough to prevent burning, and also to break up all the pieces into a smooth mass. In making quince mar-malade the skins and cores may be boiled and strained, and the juice thus gained added to the fruit and sugar.

An oil for lubricating small articles, remain thiid in varying temperatures, is thus described by the Journal of Industry: Take olive oil and dissolve it in boiling alcohol, add it drop by drop to the hot alcohol, until it is no longer taken into solution. Upon cooling, it will let fall crystals, and leave a considerable portion still fluid; the fluid part is to be poured off, filtered through a piece of white blotting paper, and either used in this form, or the alcohol may be distilled off for fresh pro-cesses, and the pure lubricating oil which will remain can be obtained for oiling watches and delicate machinery. This will not exidize or gum up, and will remain perfectly fluid even when exposed to great cold.

In a niche in the cathedral of Freiburg a box was discovered containing rings and medals. It is thought the box had remained in its hiding-place several hundred years. One of the rings examined by Dr. Schertel was of tin, nearly pure, and the metal had undergone its peculiar gray modification. Rev. E. F. L. GAUSS, Gnena, Ills., writes—"For over ten years I had been a great sunferer from pains in the small of the hack and region of the kidneys, which was most exeruciating and at times almost insufferable. Doctoring brought no relief, and I was finally advised to go abroad and seek the climate of my youth. In Germany and Switzerland, eminent physicians, after close examinations, declared my sufferings to arise from disease of the Kidneys, of long standing, and could do no no no good. I was, however, benefited by the climate and consequently returned. No sooner had I been back and resumed my pastoral work, when the old trouble grew again so intense as to make life a burden. A few mouths ago I came in possession of one of Day's Kidney Pads, put it on, and the effects were truly wonderful. The pains at once grew less and are now, after wearing the second Pad, entirely gone, and there can be no doubt that I am entirely cured, so I write this some weeks after its use, and am strong and lock again the very picture of health. I write this perfectly voluntarily, and it is dictated only by truth and great tudo. Indeed, I consider the Day kidney Pad Co. God's agents and great benefactors of mankind. May all the suffering be helped as I have been is my carnest wish."

One Dollrr for Fifty Cents. Norming in the world is more satis-NOTHING In the world is more satisfactory to the average man, or woman, than it is to get one dollar for fifty cents. People who are thoroughly honest in ordinary affairs would put themselves out five dollars' worth to get a dollar for fifty cents.

a dollar for fifty cents. Inexperienced men are losing fortunes continually by stock gambling. They know the risk—they have been told of it time and again; their common sense teaches them that very few dabblers in stocks can make even a fair rate of interest on their money—and yet—oh, and yet! somebody, they tell themselves, will make money out of the business, why not one as well as another? And so the farmer in Vermont, and the miner in Pennsylvania matther and the miner in Pennsylvania, neither of whom knows anything of the wondrous ins and outs of Wall street, invest their hard-carned hundreds in rest their nard-earned numerous in fancy stocks, and the sharp-witted brokers, who are lying in wait for just such victims, pocket the poor man's capital and give him a specious explanation which would puzzle the brains of all the lawyers in the country to under all the lawyers in the country to under-stand, and tell him "not to be discour-aged!—better luck next time?"

Look at the lottery swindles all over the country, the managers of which manage to get rich in a few years. Every man who spends his money for a lottery ticket knows that only a very few people can draw prizes, even if the drawing is conducted fairly, and he knows that the chances are that he will lose the money he invests but attil lose the money he invests but attil lose the money he invests, but still there is a chance, and he hopes that chance may fall to him.

He wants to get a dollar for fifty Gift enterprises of all descriptions flourish all over the country. It is quite the fashion in rural towns and villages for men who have broken-down old horses, or ancient carriages, or short-winded planos, which they wish to get rid of, to get up a "Gift Enterprise" and sell tickets at a quarter each, and put up the old horse, or the piano, as a capital prize. And people who do not want a horse, terprise, when they know that the equine is not worth the oats he would eat in a week, and that the piano is only fit to scare the rats with.

scare the rats with.

Why do they invest? Because they want to get one dollar for fifty cents.

This present winter we visited in a town where a certain Mr. Smith, who was formerly an itinerant tin peddler, had gone out of the business. His horse had died of old age, and his cart was so nearly ready to follow the example of the deacon's "one-horse shay" that he could not dispose of it at any price.

any riths the could not dispose of it at any price.

He conceived the brilliant idea of putting it into a "Gift Enterprise." He bought five dollars' worth of cheap jewelry to tempt the fairer sex, and the thing was advertised faithfully in the stores, and on the fences, and the result was that he took fifty dollars for the dilapidated eart, and the man who paid dilapidated cart, and the man who paid twenty-five cents for the ticket which drew the lucky number lost money by the operation. Good people, do not risk your sub-stance upon uncertainties. When you see an advertisement headed "Great see an advertisement headed "Great Chance to Make Money! Fortunes for All!" or anything like it, don't read it. It is time lost. You had better be studying the dictionary, or thinking up a theory for a railroad to the moon.—

Kate Thorn, in N. Y. Weekly.

HERE are two anecdotes that recently drifted past on the stream of chit-chat at a dinner party. An American gentleman, while taking a walk in London one day, chanced to behold in a grocer's window an immense pile of hams stamped with the name and address of a dealer in Chicago, while overhead hung a placard inscribed: "Best Canadian hams—one shilling and six pence per pound." The proprietor of the establishment chanced to come to the door, and the gentleman called his attention to the incongruity of selling HERE are two anecdotes that recently tention to the incongruity of selling Chicago hams as a Canadian product. "Ah, yes, yes!" exclaimed the grocer with an air of conviction, "Chicago is one of the United States; I had forgotten that." Next comes the story of an illiterate dame who powerered ten that. Next comes the story of an illiterate dame who possessed a very time gallery of pictures, including specimens of the old masters as well as of the modern school. She was one day engaged in showing off her art treasures to a visitor, seasoning her discourse with small facts relative to the artists whose works she possessed. "Now, that picture," she said, pointing to a large mythological scene, "that's by Rubens. He's dead."—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

If any other boy in the whole wide universe excepting Robby had been with Patty, it never would have happened. Above all, if it had been two strangers standing before the altar instead of Sister Susie and Willy Norris, it never could have happened.
But it did happen, and that is all I

FIENDS' FAILURE.

A Devilish But Unsuccessful Attempt to Throw the Janesville Accommedation Train Off the Track Last evening there was one of the most dendish schemes attempted, which can be concocted, it being nothing less than an attempt to wreck the Janesville accommodation train by placing obstacles on the track to throw it off the rails. The train left Chicago yesterday afternoon as usual on its return trip, and after leaving Woodstock, and between there and Kishwankee, the engine as which some one had placed on the track. Engineer King promptly reversed the engine, and quickly put on the air brake, but before a stop could be made, the engine struck a pieco of an old telegraph pole, which had been set upright in a cattle guard a little further along. This piece of pole was broken off by the engine striking it, and the train came to a stop. An examination of the track further along showed that other ties had been scattered along the track in furtherance of the devilish plan for wrecking the train.

Owing largely to the watchfulness and promptness of Engineer King the scheme failed, and there was but little harm done, the pilot being smashed a little, and aside from this the train escaping any particular damage, and after feeling its way along carefully for a distance, it came through as usual without further cause of alarm. The motive for such a dastardly attempt is only a matter of guess-work, there being as yet no trace by which it can be determined whether the plot was laid by some drunken man or hunatic, or by some one having a spite against the company and employes. The elumsy manner of trying to wreck the train, indicates that whoever planned it was not gifted with a very clear head, or much practical knowledge concerning wrecking trains.

All hope that the criminal may be captured, and that the punishment for such an act may be somewhere in keeping with the enormity of the offense. Language grows weak in picturing the hemousness of any sane man who would make such an attempt to cause a wreck which must have been attended by great loss of life, and public feeling would cause almost any punishment to seem too light.

When death claimed its own your anxiety and concern culminated in such a wealth of sorrow and sympathy as I shall never forget.
